

Qualification type: A Level Exam Board: Pearson Edexcel

What will I learn?

- There are three components that make up the A-Level Politics qualification.
- The first component is UK Politics. In this component, students will examine core political ideologies and will look at the elements that make up political participation: the concept of democracy, political parties, electoral systems, voting behaviour and the media.
- The second component is UK Government. In this component, students will look at alternative political ideologies and will look at the elements that make up the UK Government: the constitution, parliament, the role of the Prime Minister and the executive branch, and the relationship between the branches of government.
- The final component is Comparative Politics. In this component, students will examine the US political system as a case study and will compare and contrast it to the UK system.

How is my work assessed?

100% Examination

There are three written examinations, each lasting 2 hours.

- Paper 1: UK Politics. 84 marks. 33.3% of the overall grade.
- Paper 2: UK Government. 84 marks. 33.3% of the overall grade.
- Paper 3: Comparative Politics (USA). 84 marks. 33.3% of the overall grade.

What should I consider before starting this subject?

Students should be confident at extended or essay writing, students should have an interest in politics or political ideology. Students should be confident with humanities or social science subjects such as History, General Studies, or Sociology.

Why is this course useful and what might it lead to?

A level Politics is a good subject to learn with other humanities or social sciences such as History, Sociology or Law. Students can go on to study similar subjects at university.

Careers: working in politics, civil service, research, risk analysis, consultancy and journalism.

Where can I find out more information?

You can speak to Mr Evans Berry and more information can be found here: https://qualifications.pearson.com/en/qualifications/edexcel-a-levels/politics-2017.html